Katherine Dudley Hoehn

Katherine Dudley Hoehn is a consultant for companies and nonprofits, assisting them with proposals, writing projects, and managing events. After a career in nonprofit management, government, and government relations, in the Washington, D.C. area, she started Katherine Dudley Hoehn LLC in 2009.

Prior to starting her consulting business, she served in the George W. Bush Administration at the Corporation for National and Community Service (the agency that operates the domestic volunteer programs, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps), as Director of Government Relations, overseeing the agency's relationship with Congress and the White House.

As an inaugural board member of Friends of Theodore Roosevelt Island in Washington, D.C., a volunteer organization dedicated to helping the United States Park Service preserve and protect the living memorial to President Theodore Roosevelt, she recruited board and committee members, set up structure and bylaws, and assisted with fundraising and educational activities.

Katherine lives and works in Fernandina Beach, Florida, and writes a blog at katwritesandsnaps.com/blog. She is a Monarch Watcher, and her butterfly gardens are designated a Monarch Waystation. Her other hobbies include volunteering, gardening, travel, photography, reading, hiking, writing, kayaking, and cooking. Her rescue dog, Leah, joins her for travel, hiking, and kitchen help.
